

What did NCPF accomplish last year? During the 2008-09 membership year NCPF accomplishments included:

- 300 people attended our Annual Public Lecture entitled It's My Life: Adapting in Changing Economic Times.
- Peaceful Schools-NC was established at Central Park School in Durham (our pilot site). Nearly 50 teachers, staff, parents and students were trained in a comprehensive model of how to create a peaceful, anti-bullying school environment, and 300 K-5 students now have a safer daily learning experience.
- Provided a mental health professional liaison to Central Park School in Durham as they implement the Peaceful Schools-NC program
- Provided valuable outreach on mental health issues and activities to professionals and the public through 65 email announcements reaching over 950 subscribers
- Provided $1,500 in sponsorships for outreach programs of the NC Psychoanalytic Society, helping advance psychoanalytic ideas with over 350 people who attended the MindPlay discussions at Playmakers and the Academic Lecture with Charles Strozier.
- 150 people attended one of our three week-end events associated with our International Event entitled From Depression to Expression: A Pan-American Psychoanalytic Reawakening.
- Gave a face to Psychoanalysis in the state of NC through our display tables at the Walk for Hope in Raleigh and the Mental Health Association of NC conference, and attendance at annual statewide conference of the NC Center for NonProfits.
- Provided $2,500 in awards and scholarships to the recipients of our Journalism Prize, Raft Fellowship and Open Sky Aikido scholarship.
- Launched our 1st annual Teen Multi Media Contest to listen to what middle school and high school students are thinking about Bullying. The 2 winning entries were presented at the Back Off Bully Conference in October.
